ELEPHANT HUNTS IN AFRICA TO ADD TO MUSEUM COLLECTION

The expedition is sailing direct for Cape Town, at the extreme southern end of the continent. Here it will obtain the necessary equipment for jungle and mountain exploration. From Cape Town it will travel north into the Belgian Congo and on to the sources of the Congo river, turning east to Lake Tanganyika.

The headquarters will be established on the shores of the lake at Ujiji, a place made famous by the fact that here Stanley found Livingstone in 1871. Using Ujiji as a base the naturalists can make exploration trips into wild and little known parts of the surrounding country.

The final great step that leads to a multitude of new relationships and possibilities.

"It is not an easy question to answer," Mr. Lane said, adding that it was one "to which we wish an American can answer."

"And it takes courage," he declared, "whether we stand still and risk the scorn of the world, or enter world, or break through an inertia that will stop that leads to a multitude of new relationships and possibilities."

The view of the ordinary citizen the secretary said he thought was that as many obstacles as possible be put in the way of nations desiring to make war "but to be left as free as possible to follow our own designs, knowing that these do not endanger the peace of the world."

Now Human National Life. "We will not hazard our national life or the right of our people to determine their own institutions and destiny," he said. "But with these safeguards we will go far for the safeguarding of the world."

Democracy, after all, is but a counting of noses," Mr. Lane said, "and we presume much for a polity in which the chosen leaders of the two hundred and fifty million of the most civilized of the world's people have endorsed."

Mr. Lane said he believed everyone would have preferred that the league should have been born "in a different way, at a different time." When Theodore Roosevelt returned from his odyssey, he added, the former president made the strongest appeal for a national leader, had then voiced "for such a league."

"Then was the day for its creation," Secretary Lane continued. "But the world did not see the danger it was in."

Such men as President Taft and Mr. Root committed themselves to the project then, Mr. Lane said, but "the secret signs of the master backed by the leading army of two million men" stood in their path. William Jennings Bryan, as secretary of state, had moved in the same direction with his negotiation of arbitration treaties, Mr. Lane continued, adding:

Thought Bryan Was Visionary. "Let us be frank. We of America did not take these efforts of Rev. Ottawan Hermstedt, Thomas Fogart, Frank Papagno, R. J. Kelle, Curtis Marquette, T. Raymond McCarron, E. Ray McCartney, Chas. Bouchard, Geo. Olson, M. D. Murdoch.

Firms: The Chase Banderob Mfg. Co., the Athearn Hotel Co., National Chemical Co.

The usefulness of an airplane on an expedition of this sort would be limited chiefly to transportation of supplies, which, by the way, is a more important factor in tropical countries than might be supposed. The same scientist says that he could not depend on the natural resources of a colony to live food than on those of a tropical country. In proof of the truth of this statement he mentioned one scientific expedition that only recently had to return from South America before its work was ended because its supplies failed and it could not live off the country.

However, he said, the danger of suffering from hunger is much less in South Africa because of the prevalence of big game.

The public will probably never see the greater part of the collection made by the scientists. Exhibits of special interest will be placed on display in the museum show cases, and the rest stored away in bins of the museum scientists in study and research.

Museum authorities say that the displays of our big museums today are so large that a person attempting to take in the entire exhibit is in danger of museum fatigue.

STATE PUBLIC HEALTH DIRECTOR NAMED.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, July 31.—To assist in securing better reporting of diseases by Wisconsin physicians, more uniform reporting systems and closer cooperation between the state and federal health services Surgeon-General Ruth Blue has detailed Dr. Robert Oleson, past "assistant surgeon of the United States public health service, for special work in the office of the Wisconsin state board of health during the next few months.

Dr. Oleson, who has been 12 years with the federal department, came here from Montgomery, Ala., where he acted as sanitary officer in extra-continental service.

It was Dr. Oleson who conducted the investigation of health conditions relating to women's hours of labor in Wisconsin three years ago for the industrial commission. The commission was then reached that the shorter working day advantages both to woman worker and the manufacturer under the conditions as they exist in Wisconsin.

Dr. Gustav Windesheim, full-time health officer of Kenosha, and a life-long student of health conditions, has been confirmed by the senate as a member of the state board of health for the term ending February, 1922.

Thirty thousand returning soldiers and officers carried back to the United States $1,372,283 on board the transports during the three days. The rate of exchange allowed them was six francs flat. ## AMERICAN ANSWER TO LEAGUE QUESTION IS WANTED--LANE

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, July 31.—Patriots of women who hold differing views on the wisdom of ratifying the peace treaty including the League of Nations covenant will not be challenged "so long as they think about the nature of partnership," Secretary Lane declared here last night before a mass meeting of government employees.

"It is not an easy question to answer," Mr. Lane said, adding that it was one "to which we wish an American can answer."

"And it takes courage," he declared, "whether we stand still and risk the scorn of the world, eager world, or break through an inertia that will stop that leads to a multitude of new relationships and possibilities."

The view of the ordinary citizen the secretary said he thought was that as many obstacles as possible be put in the way of nations desiring to make war "but to be left as free as possible to follow our own designs, knowing that these do not endanger the peace of the world."

CLOTHES OF THOUSAND VARIETIES FEATURE PARADE FOR ROYALTY

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Madison, July 31.—Ethnographic parades in which the people were dressed in clothing of a thousand and varieties were some of the most picturesque features of the recent visit of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie to Transylvania formerly part of Hungary, but later conquered by Rumanian troops.

Four million Rumanians of Transylvania had looked forward for years for this time to come when the country in which they lived would again be reunited to Rumania and they saw in the coming of the king and queen evidence that this was accomplished.

In quaintness, originality, and color the parades held in many cities and towns for the benefit of the king and queen could hardly be exceeded. The dressing, worn by the peasants had changed, but little with the passing centuries. Some looked enough though they had strayed out of the Bible. They wore, sackcloth, homespun, leather, wooden shoes, the loose skirt with flowing sleeves worn by the old Romans, leather girdles for carrying weapons; highly colored sashes and moccasins, beaded aprons, and buckskin moccasins.

Queen Marie, radiant and happy, was the idol of all. Beside her stood her little child, the little Princess Ileyana, a prototype of her beautiful mother. King Ferdinand was dressed in the uniform of a general.

To the Associated Press correspondent, who was the only newspaper man accompanying the royal party, he said the cheers of the thousands as they marched past compensated him for the trials of the war.

In addition to the parades there were sumptuous displays resembling the county fairs of America. The farmers and their wives showered the king, queen and princess with gifts. Those of the Queen included rugs, towels, tablecloths, cushions, sashes, ornaments and crucifixes.

Princess Ileyana received all kinds of gifts including live lambs and rabbits.

1919 LEGISLATURE GOES INTO HISTORY; MANY BILLS VETOED

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Madison, July 31.—The 1919 session of the Wisconsin legislature has gone into history. A sine die adjournment was reached shortly before 5 o'clock Wednesday evening. At the opening of this session Jan. 8 it was correctly predicted that it would be one of the shortest sessions in the history of the state. The record stands with the exception of the 1915 session, the present session of the legislature is second for length of service. The 1915 session lasted until Aug. 5.

More bills have been vetoed by the governor at this session than by any executive at any session of the legislature.

No bills were passed over the executive's veto except 700 were approved by the governor.

There was little of interest to mark the closing day of the session. In the senate, Lieut. Gov. Dithmar presided, with Senators Huber, Nye and Staudenmayer present at the final obsequies. The assembly session was attended by Speaker Young, Assemblymen Anderson, Rich and Jordan.

The final official act of the governor was the veto of the Fletcher bill providing for land settlements. This bill appropriated $1,000,000 and was advertised as a measure which would aid soldiers in getting on the lands. The governor claimed in vetoing the bill that it would be of no special aid to the soldier. The land would be bought for the soldier and he would be given 40 years to make his payment.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE SERVICES

Several months ago after the armistice was signed, but before the Germans had signed the peace treaty, the Gazette in its editorial columns declared that notices of church services conducted in foreign languages would not be published in this newspaper. This stand was taken because the Gazette felt that until war was declared at an end, every effort should be made to stamp enemy language and customs from our midst. This newspaper adhered to this rule up to the time the peace treaty was signed.

It is the policy of this newspaper to take a broad view of every proposition which presents itself as being of interest to the public. It does not believe that racers should govern our impulses, although we have been made to suffer great losses of men to convince the foe that the world only is large enough for democracy—that autocracy cannot exist.

The war is over and such indemnity as can be paid for the damages done will be forthcoming. We must set our faces to the task of bringing out of the awful war those things which will strengthen us for the future.

One of the strongest factors along this line of endeavor is complete Americanization. That can only be successful through the co-operation of all forces in insisting that every man, woman and child of foreign birth learns our language, customs and ideals and then uses them as a standard to advance on the forward march of citizenship.

Americanization cannot make progress until the English language is taught to those of foreign birth. The English language must be preached in the churches.

The Gazette does not recede from its demands that this be brought about as soon as possible. But because many of the older people from foreign lands do not understand our language readily, it no doubt will be necessary to continue services in churches in foreign languages for their benefit. Assurance has been given by ministers of denominations which have members of foreign birth, that it is only a question of time when the English services will supplant the foreign language services. Under these circumstances, and because of the fact that peace has been declared, this newspaper will again publish notices of foreign language services until the problem has been worked out and only English is preached.

MUNICIPAL LANDING FIELD. One of these days, in the not distant future, Janesville is going to need a landing field for airplanes. The rapid progress being made by builders of these ships of the air in perfecting them so that they will be eventually put to commercial use assures the need for making preparations now for a place where they can stop.

Janesville in the last few months has shown other cities in this country that she is wide awake; that she has "pep" in going after the things that need to be done. Some of the things we have done and are doing and are going to do, are being used as a pattern for other places.

A municipal landing field would not be entirely original with Janesville, but it would show the progressive spirit for which the city is becoming noted. So much for the advertising the city would obtain.

But the big point is that we are going to need such a place—a place where any airplane on a journey from any point of the compass can land in safety, be supplied with gasoline, oil and water and go on its way. When the commercial development expands we will be ready to offer this city as one of the principal landing places, while the other cities are getting ready.

It is not a dream. The day when the airplane will be used to transport merchandise and passengers as a regular line of business is rushing towards us. The dirigible is being perfected so rapidly that it soon must be recognized as a vehicle of transportation—safe and swift.

A municipal landing field located near the city can be bought now much cheaper than it can be a few years from now. Janesville is going to grow and as it does it will be more difficult to obtain a place near the center of business for such a purpose.

Let us do it, the "Janesville way," which has become so favorably known all over the country, and provide a landing field now.

SHADOWS OF GLOOM.

News comes out of Madison that some of the state senators, returning from visits to their homes, have declared that farmers have declared themselves against the bill which provides for $16,000,000 to be used to pay state soldiers, sailors, marines and nurses who served in the war, a bonus.

We do not believe that the representative farmers of the state take this stand. We doubt if the senators who gave out such announcements have the right to make them. Perhaps a few farmers with whom they may have talked inquired about the amount of tax each would have to pay, and it is not to be supposed that none expressed themselves against the bonus bill.

The senate, however, made a hot fight against the referendum clause which would give the people an opportunity to share in the honor of awarding the gift to the fighters, and it is not to be expected that some of them would not seek the opportunity to cast gloom over the prospect for passage of the measure.

However, a campaign for the enactment of the bill will be made between now and the time for the special election, and after the proposition is explained there is little doubt that Wisconsin's citizens will show the same loyalty and patriotism they have shown in all their endeavors to back up the boys who fought their battles in France.

Congress promises another investigation. This time it is the coal situation. The announcement is made that the quiz will be conducted to serve both the house and senate. We do not know what their purposes are because little or nothing has come of the numerous investigations made in the past, but as far as the public is concerned its purpose is to learn why there should be a shortage of coal and why do they have to pay present prices?

Administration department heads are putting up a strenuous battle to maintain on the government payroll as many employees as possible despite the attempt of congress to curtail the expense to the taxpayers. The census bureau is preparing enormous additions to its forces. About 5,000 more employees will be put on the payroll of Uncle Sam in the District of Columbia and kept there until the 1920 census is taken and compiled. Members of congress are watching to see what action the bureau takes with reference to observance of the civil service system.

Assurance is given that the ice supply will last until at least October. Now is the time to turn attention to the coal problem.

ASK US

The Gazette maintains an information bureau at Washington, D. C., under the direction of Frederic J. Hasquin. Questions will be answered on any subject. Those desiring information write a letter to the Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau, Washington, D. C., and enclose a stamp. The letter will be answered by our bureau.

Q. What is the so-called finger lime? L. H. W.

A. This is a lime native to Australia. It is called finger lime because of its shape. The scientists of the department of agriculture have of late years introduced this fruit into the United States and it is now being grown here but not in commercial quantities.

Q. I planted a seed of a rare fruit and the little tree is growing nicely. It will probably take it eight or ten years to bear fruit normally. Is there any way I can get fruit from it in a shorter time? E. F.

A. Yes. This tree might be grafted on a kindred plant that is already well rooted and vigorous. The top of that plant could then be cut off so all the vigor of the older tree would go through the grafted sprout. It might be possible thus to get fruit in two years.

Q. When was the first counterfeit greenback made in the United States? K. Y. R.

A. The first counterfeit greenback detected in the United States was a $10 bill and was made in 1862. The forgers were members of the notorious Johnson family who had their headquarters in Lawrence, Indiana. Greenbacks in those days were unfamiliar and therefore the forgery escaped immediate detection.

Q. Is the council of national defense still in existence? M. V. S.

A. Congress has appropriated for the continuance of the council of national defense for at least another year. It will continue as a liaison between industry and the government through the period of readjustment.

Q. Can cripples move more freely in the water than elsewhere? T. S.

A. The specific gravity of water is greater than that of the body. Crippled limbs, the body of the postman as it shrinks.

Q. How the dun, dun, dun.

Q. How accounts that have outrun.

Q. How, the increased cost of living.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Have you heard of Realart pictures yet? You haven't? Then now is the time to read about them. Realart pictures are going to be mighty interesting to some folks because of the popular stars that have already signed up. Arthur Kane is the man who is responsible for the new organization, and the first stars to be signed up under the Realart banner are Constance Binney, Alice Brady and Mary Miles Minter.

Two of these beautiful young women are well known to all screen fans. Alice Brady and Mary Miles Minter have been entertaining audiences nightly for several years, and they are numbered among the most popular of cinematic stars. Alice Brady was formerly with Select pictures and Mary Miles Minter has been with the American Film company.

Constance Binney is the new face which will be seen when Realart pictures make their debut. Miss Binney has never played in pictures before, but she has had much experience on the stage and at present is holding up the making of her first picture because she is finishing out a very long and successful season on Broadway in "The East." Miss Binney's initial picture will be "Erstwhile Susan," which had a successful run on the stage, and Miss Brady's first picture will be "Sinners," which also ran a season on Broadway.

JULIA SANDERSON IN FILMS. Julia Sanderson, the musical comedy star, is a screen possibility in the near future. It is understood that she is to have her own producing organization financed by a group of exhibitors. Her salary for the screen is said to be $2,000 weekly.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) While I am away on a visit, would it be proper to drop a line or two to a certain boy in my home town?

(2) When a young man calls for you should you let him come to the door and wait for you, or should you be ready to go out when he comes?

(3) When your escort leaves you at your door after an entertainment, what should you say? How should you thank him for his company? I mean? Should you invite him to call again? EDDIE.

(1) Send him a card if you are very good friends, but otherwise do not write unless he made that request.

(2) Let him come to the door and invite him in to sit down while you put on your wraps.

(3) Say, "I enjoyed the evening very much." Yes, let him to come again, but do not set the time.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two young ladies, aged 20 years, and are deeply in trouble.

We are both in love with the same boy. He treats us both the same when we are together with him, but when we are alone with him separately he says, "You are better than the other." Shall we both give him a or just one of us? And is he a BLUE-EYED TWINS.

The young man is a first and unworthy of any self-respecting girl. He does not love either of you or he would be faithful to one. Do not think of going with a man so twice-faced. Both of you should give him up.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: How could a girl in her early teens refuse to accept a ring from a boy whom she goes with without hurting his feelings?

Also why is it bad taste on the part of a lady to accept jewelry from a gentleman unless she is engaged, if her mother does not care?

DO YOU COLLECT HOUSES?

I wonder how many of my reader may be part of its appeal, for as I friends share my habit of getting a child I always had a fancy for a house—but and it has window boxes and an upstairs veranda fitted up in a way that suggests the people know how to make the best of an attractive location. I have seen the tree without looking at that house and giving it a thought or two. This One I Love for Its Spaciousness.

Another of my trip-to-town houses is a great big house which stands the way out to the barn. The latter is set at right angles so that the effect of a courtyard is given to the plot enclosed in the angle. Behind the barn is a very large acre of a little roofed porch hatched to a ring in the side of the barn. This romantic proximity and the splendid size of this place appeal to me. How huge and dignified and uncrowded the rooms must be, what a splendid barn chamber for children to play in, what a beautiful garret, what plentitude of space for company. I always feel a generous sense of space and freedom when I look at that house, as I always do when I pass it.

And I Wish It, Too.

Another house which I love to look at is not very fine in itself—a comfortable typical house of the period of 20 years ago, with gables a portico, good veranda space and a colored glass window at the landing of the broad stairs, but it is well-dressed up—with shrubs and bushes that always wins a glance when handsomer neighbors go unnoticed.

And then there is—but for the sake of those who do not collect houses, I will spare you. I am sure those who do are already thinking of them and wishing they had a chance to talk back so that they might tell me about them. And I wish it too.

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

X-RAY AND SKIN CANCER

The treatment of cancer in regions get-able from the surface with the X-ray is fairly satisfactory in many inoperable cases and in cases already operated on. The X-ray has a decided value as a preventive of recurrence. In the removal of cancer, as a remedy which may alleviate symptoms and bring about a change which renders an inoperable case ultimately operable, and finally as a cure of many cases of epithelioma or skin cancer.

In a recent number of the American Journal of Roentgenology Dr. G. M. Mackie gives the results of X-ray treatment of a large number of cases of epithelioma. Among 222 cases treated, there were 201 "clinical cures." In six instances no benefit was produced by X-ray. Among 15 cases "clinically cured" and observed for periods varying from six months to more than 25 years 24 suffered relapses.

Nineteen of the 24 patients who had recurrences of the cancer were again treated with the X-ray and 14 of them recovered. Of the patients who failed to recover from the relapse after resumption of the X-ray treatment, two were cured with radium (as were also two of the first group who were not benefited at all by X-ray) and two were cured by operation.

In five cases there was a second relapse of a recurrence of the cancer within a year after the second recovery, and in four of these patients the cancer disappeared for the third time under X-ray treatment; only one patient failed to respond either to X-ray or radium treatment.

It should be remembered that epithelioma or skin cancer is the lens malignant, slowest-growing, and most durable of all types of cancer.

For the more malignant or poisonous type called carcinoma, such as commonly occurs in the stomach or in the neck or the womb and sometimes about the Chelmsford's ex-service men have notified the town council that they propose to take part in any of the proposed peace celebrations. The action endorsed at a meeting at which plans for the August demonstrations were before them for consideration.

Peach Mousse Pudding—One quart peaches, one-quarter pound macaroons, one egg, one and one-half cups milk, one level tablespoon cornstarch, one-half cup sugar, one-half pint cream.

Slice fresh peaches into a deep dish. On top of the peaches put a layer of almond macaroons. Make custard of egg milk, cornstarch, sugar in a double boiler when cool, pour over macaroons and peaches. Put in refrigerator and chill. Just before serving whip a half pint of cream and put on top.

Pineapple Snow Pudding—Soak hair a package of gelatine one hour in a cupful of cold water; then stir on one and one-half cups of sugar, the juice of a lemon and a large cupful of water; then stir in one and one-half cups of sugar, the juice of a lemon and a large cupful of boiling water. Let the gelatine dissolve, strain the mixture and put it aside to cool. When quite cold beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff broth and into them beat the mixture, spoonful at a time. Turn half an hour will be required to whip it all properly. When it is whipped put into the pudding a cupful of crushed Hawaiian pineapples drained as possible. Turn the pudding into a mold and set on the ice. Pour the sauce you may either cook the pineapple liquid to a syrup, adding to it another cupful of crushed pineapple, and pour this around the mold when it is stiff enough to turn out on a dish; or you may make a custard of a pint of milk, the yolks of three eggs, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar; cook together in a double boiler until done and thick, set aside to become cold before you pour it around the form of pudding which should be turned out on the halved slices of pineapple. In any case have all ice cold.

THROUGH FIRE AND WATER

Eighteen fire companies were on the scene within three minutes after the first alarm, awoke the city from a winter sleep.

The bells and excitement were terrible, terrific in their intensity and the crowds were kept back by an invisible barrier of cops.

Forty-five fire hoses like giant anacondas, were aimed at the Blazing quarry, while the bursting stones shot their tongues of flame to heaven and the stars.

The sight was so stupendously inspiring, that every eye was fixed upon it and with a little bit of wiggling, a man got through that solid wall of cops. He ran over and picked up an idle hose.

Pointing the nozzle to the awed crowd, he yelled, "What runs across the street without any legs?"

Right the tenth time! He is none other than our friend Oddsen Ends, the Riddle fiend.

Instantly the soaked crowd scattered to the four corners of the street. Nobody answered the question and Oddsen Ends, disappointed, turned and pointed the spouting nozzle at the fire chief who thought the whole thing a joke.

What runs across the ground without legs?" yelled Oddsen.

Drenched to the shirt, the chief picked up an axe and started for Oddsen Ends, who dropped the hose and skidded across the street.

"Water!" he yelled, as he ran.

Water runs across the ground without legs," he replied.

Oddsen accidentally hit the gong, and the horses thinking it was time to go home, started off at a gallop.

The last seen of Oddsen Ends, he was standing one leg on the back of each horse, urging them to go faster, waving his arms Ben-Hur style and betting first on one and then the other.

A CHANCE TO LIVE

BY ZOE BECKLEY

A LITTLE LIGHT.

Weeks passed, while the situation began to grow desperate. With so much walking, Bernard's shoes would wear out. Annie noticed them one night after he had gone exhausted to sleep and cried over them. The soles of both were worn clean through, making a pathetic contrast to the carefully polished uppers. She looked at his other clothes.

They were the heart-stabbing signs of poverty—the frayed cuffs of the shirt, the shirt collar torn, the matted washings, the brooken collar, the shine of the coat at elbow and shoulder.

The next day Annie went out and pawned the locket and chain. Bernie had bought her from his first pool winnings. She rolled up $10 of the $12 she had got on it and stuck it under his dinner plate with the note that said: "See a short money?" Yes, sir, I'm still an honest woman. I saved it out of my past allowance." She thought the tiny Joe would help keep things cheery.

Bernard hugged her, keeping his face from her view.

"I'm going to get something tomorrow," he said later, his jaw set hard. "It may not be as good as before, but I'll stand some time or—well, I'll stand there all."

Bills were piling up. The rent was overdue. Annie talked to the grocery man and to the collector. Both of them looked at her anxious young face with something of sympathy in their eyes and promised to "wait a minute."

She had a new silk dress that she had scarcely worn. She took that to the man with whom her locket was pledged. He held it to the light, felt it, creased the fabric, wet it with his thumb and finger and shook it at arm's length, reflectively.

"It's a rotten job, Nan—and you such a wonder!" said Bernie innocently. Annie, understanding well that he had no idea what it was, "What have you got to do with it? I wouldn't know how to 'clerkship' or 'chipclerk' if my life depended on it. Now, sit—let us dine!"

One thing in particular the children noticed right away. That was that everybody was very polite and kind to the captain. Captain Savage stopped to inquire the way to the building where a group of American officers he knew were quartered, the man he asked explained fully how to reach the building and then talked a few minutes about America and the folks there.

The captain stopped at the officers' headquarters long enough to leave. The captain was London and then took Ladydean and the children to the hotel where they were to live during their stay in the city.

Late that day Ladydean took the children to Westminster Abbey. There they saw where most of the great men in England's history are buried. The greatest honor that can be paid to a great man in England is to have his death buried in the Abbey, "order that he be buried in the Abbey, you know."

"I'm afraid you little folks won't remember many of the names," said Ladydean, "but when you are older and read about England's heroes and learn that they were buried here you'll feel real proud to know that you visited here on your trip."

Ladydean also told the children that all the British and Americans in England were buried at the Abbey. When she told them the pretty story of the beloved Princess Pat.

"No!" she cried, and lifting her face close to his for the shortest instant possible, she gave him a look half merry, half defiant, but all fond. It was an adorable look.

him away, withdrawing her hand. "George, let's not talk of solemn things."

"Solemn things? Like, what?"

"Like—being engaged."

But George had become altogether jubilant, and he laughed triumphantly. "Good gracious, that isn't solemn!"

"It is too!" she said, wiping her eyes. "It's too solemn for us."

"No, it isn't. I—"

"Let's sit down and be sensible, dear," she said. "You sit over there."

"I will if you'll call me 'dear' again."

"No," she said. "I'll only call you that once again this summer—the night before you go away."

"That will have to do, then," he laughed, "so long as I know we're engaged."

"But we're not!" she protested. "And we never will be, if you don't promise not to speak of it again until I tell you to!"

"I won't promise that," said the happy George. "I'll only promise not to speak of it till the next time you call me 'dear,' and you've promised to call me that the night before I leave for my senior year."

"Oh, but I didn't!" she said earnestly, then hesitated. "Did I?"

"Didn't you?"

"I don't think I meant it," she murmured, her wet lashes flickering above troubled eyes.

"I know one thing about you," he said gayly, his triumph increasing; "you never back on anything you said yet, and I'm not afraid of this being the first time!"

"But we mustn't let—" she faltered; then went on tremulously, "George, we've got on so well together we won't let this make a difference between us, will we?" And she joined in his laughter.

"It will all depend on what you tell me the night before I go away. You agree we're going to settle things then, don't you, Lucy?"

"I don't promise!"

"Yes, you do! Don't you?"

"Well—"

CHAPTER X.

That night George began a jubilant warfare upon his Aunt Fanny, opening the campaign upon his return home at about eleven o'clock. Fanny had retired, and was presumably asleep, but George, on the way to his own room, paused before her door and serenaded her in a full baritone:

"As I walk along the Bay de Balon
With my independent air,
The people all declare,
'He must be a millionaire'
Oh, you hear them sigh, and wish to die,
And see them wink the other eye
At the man that broke the bank at Monte Carlo!"

After breakfasting in bed, George spent the next morning at his grandfather's and did not encounter his Aunt Fanny until lunch, when she seemed to be ready for him.

"Thank you so much for the serenade, George!" she said. "Your poor father tells me he'd just got to sleep for the first time in two nights, but after your kind attentions he lay awake the rest of last night."

"Perfectly true," Mr. Minnaer said grimly.

"Of course, I didn't know, sir," George hastened to assure him. "I'm awfully sorry. But Aunt Fanny was so gloomy and excited before I went out, last evening, I thought she needed cheering up."

He turned to his mother. "What's the matter with grandfather?"

" Didn't you see him this morning?" Isabel asked.

"Yes. He was glad to see me, and all that, but he seemed pretty fidgety. Has he been having trouble with his heart again?"

"Not lately. No."

"Well, he's not himself. What's he upset over?"

Isabel looked serious; however, it was her husband who suggested gloomily, "I suppose the Major's bothered about this Sydney and Amelia business, most likely."

"What Sydney and Amelia business?" George asked.

"Your mother can tell you, if she wants to," Minnaer said. "It's not my side of the family, so I keep off."

"It's rather disagreeable for all of us, George," Isabel began. "You see, your Uncle Sydney wanted a diplomatic position, and he thought Brother George, being in congress, could arrange it. George did get him the offer of a South American ministry, but Sydney wanted a European ambassadorship, and he became quite indignant with poor George for thinking he'd take anything smaller—and he believes George didn't work hard enough for him. George had done his best, of course, and now he's out of congress, and won't run again—so there's Sydney's idea of a big diplomatic position gone for good. Well, Sydney and your Aunt Amelia are terribly disappointed, and they say they've been thinking for years that this town isn't really fit to live in—for a gentleman," Sydney says—and it is getting rather big and dirty. So they've sold their house and decided to go abroad to live permanently; there's a villa near Florence they've often talked of buying. And they want father to let them have their share of the estate now, instead of waiting for him to leave it to them in his will."

"Well, I suppose that's fair enough," George said. "That is, in case he intended to leave them a certain amount in his will."

"Of course that's understood, George. Father explained his will to us long ago; a third to them, and a third to Brother George, and a third to us."

Her son made a simple calculation in his mind. Uncle George was a bachelor, and probably would never marry; Sydney and Amelia were childless. The Major's only grandchild appeared to remain the eventual heir of the entire property, no matter if the Major did turn over to Sydney a third of it now. "Well, I suppose it's grandfather's own affair. He can do it or not just as he likes. I don't see why he'd mind much."

"He seemed rather confused and pained about it," Isabel said. "I think they oughtn't to urge it. George says that the estate won't stand taking out the third that Sydney wants, and Sydney and Amelia are believing like a couple of pigs. I'm on George's side, whether he's right or wrong. I always was from the time we were children, and Sydney and Amelia are hurt with me about it. I'm afraid. They've stopped speaking to George entirely. Poor father! Family rows at this time of life."

An hour after lunch, George strolled over to his grandfather's, intending to apply for further information, as a party rightfully interested.

Dinner Stories

A sorry blow has been dealt at those who maintain we are not a commercial race. You gave me the happy George. "I'll only promise not to speak of it till the next time you call me 'dear,' and you've promised to call me that the night before I leave for my senior year."

"Oh, but I didn't!" she said earnestly, then hesitated. "Did I?"

" Didn't you?"

"I don't think I meant it," she murmured, her wet lashes flickering above troubled eyes.

"I know one thing about you," he said gayly, his triumph increasing; "you never back on anything you said yet, and I'm not afraid of this being the first time!"

"But we mustn't let—" she faltered; then went on tremulously, "George, we've got on so well together we won't let this make a difference between us, will we?" And she joined in his laughter.

"It will all depend on what you tell me the night before I go away. You agree we're going to settle things then, don't you, Lucy?"

"I don't promise!"

"Yes, you do! Don't you?"

"Well—"

CHAPTER X.

That night George began a jubilant warfare upon his Aunt Fanny, opening the campaign upon his return home at about eleven o'clock. Fanny had retired, and was presumably asleep, but George, on the way to his own room, paused before her door and serenaded her in a full baritone:

"As I walk along the Bay de Balon
With my independent air,
The people all declare,
'He must be a millionaire'
Oh, you hear them sigh, and wish to die,
And see them wink the other eye
At the man that broke the bank at Monte Carlo!"

After breakfasting in bed, George spent the next morning at his grandfather's and did not encounter his Aunt Fanny until lunch, when she seemed to be ready for him.

"Thank you so much for the serenade, George!" she said. "Your poor father tells me he'd just got to sleep for the first time in two nights, but after your kind attentions he lay awake the rest of last night."

"Perfectly true," Mr. Minnaer said grimly.

"Of course, I didn't know, sir," George hastened to assure him. "I'm awfully sorry. But Aunt Fanny was so gloomy and excited before I went out, last evening, I thought she needed cheering up."

He turned to his mother. "What's the matter with grandfather?"

" Didn't you see him this morning?" Isabel asked.

"Yes. He was glad to see me, and all that, but he seemed pretty fidgety. Has he been having trouble with his heart again?"

"Not lately. No."

"Well, he's not himself. What's he upset over?"

Isabel looked serious; however, it was her husband who suggested gloomily, "I suppose the Major's bothered about this Sydney and Amelia business, most likely."

"What Sydney and Amelia business?" George asked.

"Your mother can tell you, if she wants to," Minnaer said. "It's not my side of the family, so I keep off."

"It's rather disagreeable for all of us, George," Isabel began. "You see, your Uncle Sydney wanted a diplomatic position, and he thought Brother George, being in congress, could arrange it. George did get him the offer of a South American ministry, but Sydney wanted a European ambassadorship, and he became quite indignant with poor George for thinking he'd take anything smaller—and he believes George didn't work hard enough for him. George had done his best, of course, and now he's out of congress, and won't run again—so there's Sydney's idea of a big diplomatic position gone for good. Well, Sydney and your Aunt Amelia are terribly disappointed, and they say they've been thinking for years that this town isn't really fit to live in—for a gentleman," Sydney says—and it is getting rather big and dirty. So they've sold their house and decided to go abroad to live permanently; there's a villa near Florence they've often talked of buying. And they want father to let them have their share of the estate now, instead of waiting for him to leave it to them in his will."

"Well, I suppose that's fair enough," George said. "That is, in case he intended to leave them a certain amount in his will."

"Of course that's understood, George. Father explained his will to us long ago; a third to them, and a third to Brother George, and a third to us."

Her son made a simple calculation in his mind. Uncle George was a bachelor, and probably would never marry; Sydney and Amelia were childless. The Major's only grandchild appeared to remain the eventual heir of the entire property, no matter if the Major did turn over to Sydney a third of it now. "Well, I suppose it's grandfather's own affair. He can do it or not just as he likes. I don't see why Bitro-phosphate is made entirely of the organic phosphate compound referred to in the National Standard Dispensary as being an excellent tonic preparation to which no objection is made; moreover, if we judge from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being introduced for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, Bitro-phosphate, now a daily used article, is the best known and easiest to administer. Both patients claim they have not felt so strong and well for the past twelve years.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, are soon relieved. Bitro-phosphate test requires no patient modification, and may not be confused with any of the secret nostrums, so-called "cure-all."

The ROMANCE of BUSINESS

TRUE STORIES of SUCCESSFUL WOMEN

By EDITH MORIARTY

Rose Gorman is a round-faced, red-cheeked girl of 18. She is more or less ordinary to look at, having dark winking blue eyes and curly hair. In fact, Rose is one of those girls who might hold any number of jobs just because of her looks. She was educated in the city schools and went as far as the second year of high school, which is not very far in these days when so much emphasis is put upon higher education.

When Rose left high school she stayed at home for a year, but found that she was just as dissatisfied at home with little to do save the dull routine of dishes and beds as she had been with the arduous school lessons. And so she decided to go to work. The question of what to do was a problem. Rose was fitted for nothing in particular. She was rather shy and did not care to clerk, so she was the ergonomist for one of her years and little experience. She looked through the papers and answered many advertisements, but was usually met with the question, "Have you had any experience?" And when the answer was negative, as it always was, she was told that they would "keep her on their list." She was beginning to get a bit discouraged when her chum, Mamie Hardin, who worked in Morrison's, came home one night with the news that they needed an Inspector or bundle girl in the blouse department at Morrison's exclusive women's apparel shop.

Mamie was enthusiastic at the prospect of working at Morrison's in the same department with her chum and she eagerly told her family of the opportunity which was knocking at her door. They were all rejoicing with her except Rose's father, who had

"I, Mary MacLane" Visits Jail at Modiste's Request

CHICAGO—Things haven't been going all well with Mary MacLane, author of "I, Mary MacLane," and heroine of the frenzied film, "Men Who Have Made Love to Me."

No, indeed.

There's only one consolation, it would appear—there will be lots of material for a new book before Mary gets out of her troubles.

Mary was entertaining a friend in her home at 420 Wrightwood avenue recently when who should drop in but Pat Loftus and Gregory Moran, the handsomest detectives in the whole detective bureau. They brought with them, for Mary's benefit, a curious document from the pens of some Wall Street medics, 620 Michigan avenue, and Judge John Newcomer. It asked for Mary's arrest on the charge of larceny by bailee.

Attorney Sidney J. Frank threw some light on the manuscript, saying that when Mary was about to stage her play for the camera, Mme. Ripley loaned her gowns and furs and hats and tunics. These were to be returned for pay, according to Frank. He says they were not brought back, nor was there any money given Mme. Ripley for them. So they took I, Mary, to Detention Home No. 1, and her friend accompanied her and talked of getting bond. The detectives asked the young author if she could furnish a cash bond. But Mary had only 85 cents. So she was asked to remain until the amount of the bond was obtained, which was a short time later.

Overseas Nurses Find All Their Friends at "Y"

It is furnished in yellow and brown. There are always yellow flowers blooming in the sunshine. The dishes are the quaint pottery style of Brittany. Everything about the room says "made in France," even the little black-haired maid who makes sandwiches and tea and stove in one corner. But the food is American and the guests are American.

While American nurses are waiting their turn in line, or are putting in time until they can get a fitting at the nurses' equipment bureaus in Paris, they drop into the yellow and brown corner of the big office building for a cup of tea, a rest in a real chair or a chat with friends. This is one of the Y. W. C. A.'s clubs for nurses. Just now it is busier than usual for nurses are coming into Paris

Safady's Rails Accept Challenge Flung Out By Darien Nine

By George McManus.

WANT GAME PLAYED IN JANESEVILLE

Darien's biting challenge flung out yesterday was readily accepted last night by the C. M. & St. P. Rails under the leadership of Manager Carl Safady, who said today his team would go to play for a side bet of double the $100 amount suggested by Darien, just to make things interesting. The glove has been picked up, whether the game will ever be played this year remains doubtful because of the fact that Darien is asking that it be played on a neutral diamond, probably at Sharon, or Woodstock.

The Rails are willing and seemingly most anxious to settle matters but they want to do it on a Janeville diamond. They feel that the sportsmanship on the part of Darien will result in the game being played here in the next two or three weeks as the Rails have already played two games at Darien, one of which they won, amid the noise of a hostile crowd. The Darien nine has not appeared on a local diamond this year.

Murphy the Savior.

Owing to the fact that the home diamond of the Rails down in Spring Brook is unfit for a championship game of this sort if it is played there it will have to be staged on some other grounds. Complete use of the fair grounds diamond for the affair was offered last night to Manager Safady by Murphy, J. Murphy of the Lawmen of Janeville. The Janevites chief agrees to let the game he played there as a double header with one of the city club games as the wind up. Should this be arranged it would prove a drawing card that would doubtless pack the stand.

The Rails, just organized this year, by the C. M. & St. P. Athletic club have been going great guns and have taken everything in camp that is in their class. With Les Pine on the hill with a mean drop and J. Gregory, one of the best amateur catchers in the city today, on the receiving end, the track stars have a battery which, when going right is practically unbeatable. Other Stars Too.

To back up the big fellows there is a splendid array of home talent including Surney at short, Neave on first, Eckman at second, and Wills on third, a quartette of slugging stars who can get hits when hits count. In the outfield, there are Palmer, Griffin, McClaff, and Condon to choose from. All of these men have been given the crucial test and have been found to be there.

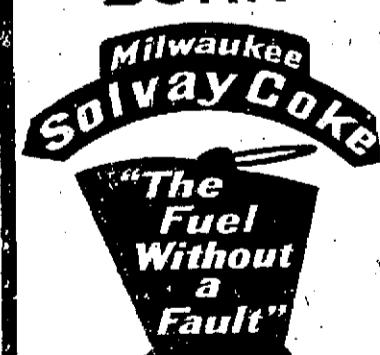

The Rails will be unable to play Darien until after August 10, Chief Safady states. They were to have played the Fairy Apprentices here next Sunday but owing to the condition of the diamond it was necessary to cancel.

What Is SOLVAY COKE?

It is the product which results from baking a proper mixture of superior coals in air-tight retorts by means of external heat, in much the same manner as bread is baked in an oven—it is really baked coal.

The patented Solvay Process removes the smoke, soot and tarry matter, leaving practically pure carbon, the heat element. The fuel that has the most carbon will give the greatest heat.

BURN

The housewife enjoys it because it is clean—easy to handle—light in weight, and because it is always dependable whether used in cook stove, heater or furnace. It is cheaper than hard coal and extensive tests by the University of Illinois showed the heating efficiency of SOLVAY COKE to me 11% greater than they were able to get from anthracite, which means that even if you had to pay equal prices for it, Milwaukee Solvay Coke would be 11% cheaper than hard coal.

Badger Fans Wise To M'Coy

Al. McCoy of Brooklyn, former "cheese" champion of the middle-weight class, by reason of a fistic know-victory over Chicago Chip, conqueror of Frank Kius, seems to be about the end of his string as a consumer of punishment. McCoy battled Jack O'Dowd recently. O'Dowd put McCoy away in three rounds. McCoy was as fast as an alderman and as slow as a tractor, claiming he went into the bout "just to get the money and without any idea of winning."

Taking beatings was one of McCoy's specialties since he first donned a glove. Never owing to any slight resemblance of his as a boxer, the Brooklyn has piled up a good fortune going about the country and permitting his face to be used as a target. He can assimilate a terrific amount of punishment, although he rarely takes the offensive regardless of who his opponent might be.

Boxing clubs are getting wise to McCoy's game. Wisconsin has lined up against the future champion, and he is just as same as disqualification in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Boston and many other places where he has endeavored to take a beating for a set sum. Promoters have come to figure McCoy's tactics as entirely too close to the brutality stuff to endanger the game by permitting him to appear, and with the winter season approaching it looks as though McCoy's earning capacity will be seriously curtailed.

One of the most interesting features about McCoy's work is his ability to stand up under the most grueling sort of punishment. Joe Chip, George Chip, Kayo Laughlin, Mike O'Dowd, Free-for-all and dozens of seventh raters down have punched themselves solid without stopping McCoy, yet he always comes back for more. McCoy really thinks his game is at its best one too, despite the fact his nose has been smashed several times, and his face punched in all sides until its contour has been decimated with lines of terrible irregularity.

$100,000 IS ESTIMATE OF FLAMES' TOLL

(By JIMMIE McCUE.)

Edgerton, July 25.—Fire originating from a gasoline blow torch did damage here estimated at between $75,000 and $100,000 this morning shortly before 8 o'clock. The fire started in the Schrubb and Tall garage on Henry street and quickly spread to adjoining buildings, including Maves' pool hall, the Lyric theatre, and a barn owned by Albert Smith. The garage was completely demolished. The repair room, which is said by many to be one of the finest in Wisconsin, was a total loss.

Maves and Co. stated that they were amply covered with insurance. The Schrubb and Tall garage was unable to estimate its loss, but carried considerable insurance. The Smith barn was partially insured. Lackner and Knapp, electrical contractors, who had rooms in the garage building, said they could not estimate their loss at this time.

CHALGREN GRAIN REVIEW.
Chicago, July 31.—Although rain has been falling in the market area to east the corn market today set-backs were not of a lasting sort. Offerings proved to be scarce and unrepresented, demand was commission houses showing up. Bulls contended that general soaking rains were needed and that serious crop damage had already occurred in some sections. Opening prices, which ranged from 34c decline to 36c advance, with September 1.65 to 1.69, and December 1.68 to 1.69, were followed until the market was reached well above yesterday's finish.

"At first, the average American business man is likely to be repelled by the constant attitude of 'manana,'" said Mr. Copeland, "but experience shows that the Ecuadorian's 'manana' is as good as our 'today.' He pays his bills punctually—but one must be content to wait until 'manana'."

Textiles and foodstuffs of all kinds are the chief items imported by the people of Ecuador. There is also a heavy demand for hardware, ready-made clothing, machinery, drugs, and books.

The principal articles of export are cacao, cotton hats, coffee, vegetable ivory, cotton, hides, and rubber.

"Ecuador is a land of paradoxes," observed the vice consul. "The Panama-hat capital of the world is not Panama, but Jipijapa or Monte Cristi, Ecuador.

"Another paradox is that many deadly insects and reptiles are not deadly in Ecuador. For instance, I have never known of a case where the bite of a tarantula has proved fatal."

"With the extirpation of yellow fever, through the efforts of the Rockefeller foundation, one of the greatest deterrents to the advent of foreigners has been removed."

Superstition, which is not confined to the ignorant classes, is a dominant trait of the Ecuadorians, says Mr. Copeland.

According to Mr. Copeland, there is a great diversity of climate in Ecuador, ranging from the hot humidity of Guayaquil to the bracing air of Quito, the capital, and of the number of mountain resorts. The commercial center of the country, however, is Guayaquil.

DETECTIVE WATCHES MEXICAN OIL FIELDS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Washington, July 31.—Advices from Mexico City today report the sending of a number of secret service men by Chief Orozco, formerly chief of police of Mexico City, into the oil fields at Tampico, in an endeavor to seek evidence against foreign oil companies operating in the section. Attention of the oil department has been called to the action which is believed to be another move on the part of the Mexican government to bring about the confiscation of the foreign owned oil properties.

It was charged the foreign oil companies were aiding revolutionaries according to state department officials. The rebel Lelaz is the only person, aside from the Carranza authorities, who is receiving any aid from the companies.

Pelaez, it is explained, is being paid a salary for protection of the oil fields south of Tampico. The salary is apportioned among the various foreign companies and has been approved by the state department here and by the British, Dutch and French foreign offices.

Aviator Flies Across South American Continent

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Santiago, Chile, July 31.—Lieut. Locatelli, a member of the Italian aviation mission now in Argentina, completed today an airplane flight from Buenos Aires to Viaparaiso, thus marking the first crossing by air of the South American continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

PUT a pipe in your face that's filled cheerily brimful of Prince Albert, if you're on the trail of smoke peace! For, P.A. will sing you a song of tobacco joy that will make you wish your life job was to see how much of the national joy smoke you could get away with every twenty-four hours!

You can "carry on" with Prince Albert through thick and thin. You'll be after laying down a smoke barrage that'll make the boys think of the old front line in France!

P. A. never tires your taste because it has the quality! And, let it slip into your think-tank that P. A. is made by our exclusive patented process that cuts out bite and parch—assurance that you can hit smoke-record-high-spots seven days out of every week without any comeback but real smoke joy!
